The market is a place of life and death, of joy and sorrow, of hope and despair. It is a place where people come to buy and sell, to meet and greet, to share and care. It is a place where the community comes together, where the individual finds his or her place. It is a place where the past meets the present, where the old meets the new. It is a place where the market is a place of life and death, of joy and sorrow, of hope and despair.
