Two

This site is located nearby center of the town and is full of life and it also has been abandoned due to the old city reconstruction.

Four

The doors of houses along Kibing Street vary in materials, colors, shapes, and sizes.
It is not hard to find an old building that could look like a modern one. This idea inspired the concept of a portal to market downtown as a landmark.

Your Journey

37K 315 Sacred Space

Locals along Kibing Street honor sacred beliefs, wrapping banyan trees with three-colored cloths and placing spirit houses on high branches for good luck. Offerings like pig heads, red socks, and Thai sweets are placed beneath the roots, symbolizing the tree absorbing their essence.

On the walkways along Kibing Street, you can see green and red surfaces, making it look not very walkable. There is the stain that make up from gravel and clear material to make it look like the water.

315K 315 Sacred Space

The water in Kibing Street is filled with trash and dirt, making it black and giving off a bad smell. The visitor will see the shadow of the water pattern and also trash that float on it.
This room is also in the middle that it connects everything together.

315K 315 Sacred Space

Villagers' house with no privacy. There is a hole that you can look into if you walk past. So the villagers found simple things around them to close. There is light pass through those holes and also the ceiling is lower than usual.
